Course Description:

The WCEC Spring Conference 2010 is designed to be an interactive day identifying solutions to the challenges facing us in PT and PTA Clinical Education.

Efficient and Effective Utilization of the web based Clinical Performance Instrument (CPI).

The purpose of this session is to provide information on efficient navigation through the online CPI and to discuss optimal use of this tool in the assessment of PT students, and in the near future, PTA students. Topics covered will include: considerations for assigning ratings, incorporation of the use of anchor criteria and performance dimensions, providing meaningful written feedback to the DPT student, understanding the various expectations across the internship continuum from the initial to the final clinical placement.

Optimizing Resources in the Ever Changing World of PT Clinical Education

This session includes interactive discussion focusing on identification of methods to increase effective and efficient use of clinical education sites and staff.

Optimal skills for today's CI ("Can I really be an effective CI for today's DPT Student?")

Today's PT may question whether s/he can be an effective CI for a DPT student, given the change in the degree that has occurred over time. This session will identify the many valuable elements that the experienced PT contributes to the clinical experience.

Course Objectives:

Course participants will:

- Understand the correct utilization of the web based CPI for assessment of students.
- Correctly identify entry level performance on the CPI for specific practice environments.
- Understand how to navigate the web based CPI appropriately and efficiently.
- Discuss strategies for optimizing resources in PT/PTA clinical education.
- Identify characteristics and skills of experienced clinicians that support the learning and mentoring of the DPT student.
